The trouble between Germany and Spain.

which at first seemed likely to sober down into a dispute which could be settled by arbitration, threatens now to ripen into a most serious quarrel. When the German Government first advanced a claim to the Caroline Islands, great indignation was displayed in . Madrid, and a rupture of diplomatic relations was threatened. This, however, we were somewhat disposed to regard as a mere bruium fulmen uttered in the first moments of excitement by the proud Castilians. The German Press appear to have treated the matter coolly, holding that the Spanish claims were obsolete and had never been enforced. Meantime, it would seem that some action has been taken on both sides. The German corvette Elisabeth left Singapore on the 14th June last for some destination unknown, and it is probable that the German flag has been boisted in the Carolines by that vessel. At all events, there is little doubt that the step has been taken, and according to Reuter, it has occasioned intense excitement in Madrid. So enraged, indeed, German Legation and tore down the German to cause the exchange of anything -- but Madrid, but more serious still is the attitude | and thought it better to get north, assumed by Schor Sagasta, the leader of the Liberal party, and former Prime Minister. The custom has spread in both directions. It is found in Eastern Europe; what is that church on the Drave, the legend of which says its tower could nohow be raised; each, day's work, crumbled down during the night; so the architect, enticing his bride to look at what was being done, nuched her in, walled her up, and then finished his building without further hindrance? It is found in China, and, above all in Burmah, where they say that when Amarapoora, the old espital, dishonoured by the presence of strangers who came to enforce the treaty that-took away Rangoon and all the Burmese seaconst, was abandoned, and Mandalay was made the capital, fifty-two people were buried alive under the different gates of the new city, with the view of making them safe against attack. But Mexico was, beyond all others, the land of human sacrifices. No doubt the Spaniards exaggerated; Bishop Lus Casas says that they did. They wanted an excuse for destroying the whole native society; and making the people bewers of wood and drawers of water. But all allowance made, too much remains indisputably true. Every god and goddess had a festival of blood, at which the agonies of the victims were gloated over by vast crowds. The heart was torn out and offered to the deity, the face of whose idol was smeared with the warm bleod. The Spanish eyewitnesses describe the scene: "They sliced open the poor wretches as one slices a melon," with the macquituitl-a two-handed "up by the Jesuits of Paraguay, of whom, to his relations, who acknowledged the gifts when she lay a dying, her confessor asked : by return presents of fine feathers or gold Now what would you fancy -some fresh ornaments.
